Four more Clubs for League Football

By WALTER PILKINGTON

The English Football League, has been extended to include an additional four teams.

The League is a remarkable organisation for many reasons; it has existed 60 years and today is stronger than ever; it conducts its business with a quiet efficiency and clockwork regularity which offer an example of thoroughness without fuss.

Controversy comes and goes, clubs rise and fall but the men behind the League remain aloof, calmly pursuing a set path and shaping football politics for the common good.

Berkeley, July 1. The University of California took aim today at a group of employees who refused to sign a non-Communist oath, after pointing its initial blast at al young assistant.

Fired from his job on Friday and barred from the University's |top-secret radiation laboratory was William Cartwright, a 24year-old graduate student. His dismissal came as a result of a decision taken by the Board of Regents. on June 23 not to renew the contracts of 157 of the employees who refused to sign the non-Communist . oath.

Cartwright received notice of his separation in a letter from George' Everson, director of scientific personnel. The letter offered Cartwright his job back in August if he would sign the ooth. Cartwright gave no indiention whether he will comply with the order. He still has one year's work in physics to complate, before he receives his Doctor's degree.

The action was the first against the group of 256 employees who have refused to sign the oath.—

Cairo, July 1. The Egyptian Prime Minister, Mustafa El Nahas Pasha, declared today in an interview on Korea that peace could not be preserved on the basis of "international favouritism."

He was defending the Egyptian statement on nonsupport for the Security Council action in a statement to the Wafdist (Government party) newspaper "Al Balagha.",

"Egypt's decision is clear! and needs no further explanation," he said. "It cannot be misinterpreted. It is the voice of a free nation in the name of all nations which cherish peace on the basis of justice.

"Every nation with a case before the United Nations has expected the organisation would stand with right and enable it to win even though might were on the other side. "These nations are looking today to the United Nations or the Security Council and find them using two different standards-in the Korea question they act with speed and use armed forces but nothing was done in other cases.

"Egypt cannot forget her own case, still pending before the Security Council, and we consider it a case of aggression. We cannot forget there are other cases for other hations, who are in a miserable condition as a result of international favouritism. "Pence cannot be maintained on that basis. I need not tell you after all this that Egypt does not support any aggressor, and we United Nations.

Hong Kong's youngest pilot

'A silm, alert Chinese youth stood calmly by the helm of freighter to guide her through Lyemum Pass and theace to her bupy in midstream.

His bearing was unerring and masterly. His confidence of bringing the vessel in safely through the treacherous pass wa: that of a veteran.

It was not surprising. The young man was none other than Chan Yuen, the Colony's youngest hurbour pilot, who joined the ranks last May after bein licensed by the Marine Depart,

In his 27-month apprenticeship with the well-known veterar Pilot Cheung, Chan Yuen guidec in and out of harbour 522 ships Since becoming a licensed pilot he has already brought in and out of port 35 ships—since May Now Chan Yuen is working in conjunction with his "tutor" Pilot Cheung, who has been running a one-man pilot service.

Chan Yuen is no stranger in the Colony. His father is one of the Government servants. Chan Yuch is an "old boy" of Ellis Kadoorie School, where the war interrupted his studies, and subsequently led him to the Colony's premiere professionharbour pileting. At the tender age of seven

Chan Yuen bogan his "Western" education of the St. Louis Industrial School. He won a scholarship which put him into the Ellis Kadcorie School, where he studied from Class 8 to Class 4 until the war, when school closed. His taste for the sea dated back to his early years when he was keenly interested in rowing swimming and sailing. His interest increased when he befriended Skipper K. Y. Young, master of the Wah Chung when he was in school.

Chan Yuen began to take avening "lessons"-when most of his time was taken up listening ic the wonderful stories of the see and the technique of salling.

Mr. Chan Yuon-Hong Kong's youngest harbour pilot.

When the Japanese came Chan Yuen went to Macao, where he began to put his knowledge to steamer's godowns, and all as sweating coolies told on—tired tillation in evaportors, newly launch service as a seamen.

In 1943, he was a deckhand of the my. Tai Tack, plying the Kwangtung Coast.

Complementing his normal duties with night studies, Chan Yuen eventually obtained a higher post aboard the ss. Po On, where he became a bostswaln in 1944

Then as a quartermaster, he served on the cs. Tibadak, mv. Iris and Straat Soenda after the Liberation.
